

Exotic secrets of ostrich oil for skin care begin to unfold

CHICAGO, IL

All natural ostrich oil is now beginning to reveal its exotic secrets as skin care trials and detailed analysis reports become available.

For thousands of years, all natural ostrich oil has been used as a skin care emollient. Even Pliny, the 1st Century AD Roman philosopher wrote extensively about the benefits of using ostrich oil.

"Ostrich oil contains an array of essential fatty acid components including oleic, palmitic, linoleic and linolenic, according to independent laboratory tests" said Ostriches On Line owner Steve Warrington, who is organizing the field trials and analysis reports.

"There has always been a mysticism surrounding all natural ostrich oil," continued Warrington. "Legend has it that Ashanti, the African Goddess of Beauty, learned the true secrets and unique powers of ostrich oil to enhance her average looks ... thereby transforming herself into the most beautiful woman in all of Africa."

"I don't think we can make such claims today," continued Warrington, "but there is definite laboratory proof that the natural ingredients in ostrich oil provide essential fatty acids to the skin and can provide relief from common aches and pains.

"The health benefits of monosaturated and polyunsaturated fatty acids are significant" added Warrington, "because they are required by the body for normal function, but are not actually produced within the body itself and must therefore be gained from external sources.

"With the introduction of our new range of Ashanti Exotic Ostrich Oil we now make available a full line of skin care cosmetics which utilize the known benefits of all natural ostrich oil." said Warrington.

"Existing clients and our new field trials have provided very positive feedback which lead us to believe that all natural ostrich oil not only makes the skin feel smoother and look better, but the healing factor for minor aches and pains are an immense benefit as well." added Warrington.
